Strategic marketing for law firms

WHY THIS EVENT?

You are always being invited to attend law firm business development conferences, true. But this one really is different. Why? Because based on our ten year long experience in running our successful Strategic marketing for law firms conference, we know that what would really help you right now in your day-to-day role, is to hear directly from your clients, both external and internal.

In the case of external clients, we know that you want to hear from new General Counsel faces from a variety of different industry sectors – who can give you a fresh perspective on how they see the procurement of legal services moving forward. Our client panel, which includes the heads of legal from organisations including HSBC, BT and Legal Services Lincolnshire, will give you a valuable opportunity to find out exactly where you stand.

Your most critical internal clients may be your Managing Partner and your Finance Director and, for the very first time, this September's conference features a special insight panel where you will also get a unique opportunity to quiz two law firm Chief Executives and a Finance Director on what they want from their marketers. What would convince them to sign off spend on a marketing programme at a time when there is still a need to keep expenditure down for instance? How can you then present the business case for your marketing initiatives more effectively to your own Managing Partner when you return to the office?

To put it all in context, our highly regarded keynote speaker, Alan Hodgart, will set the scene for the day with a strategic overview that will help you understand how your existing marketing strategy currently stacks up against anticipated long-term market change. He will look at not just the deregulation of legal services, but also the local and global economic forecast and demographic and generational trends to give you a better idea of whether or not your marketing strategy is sufficiently aligned to your firm's overall strategic goals.

This one-day intensive focused agenda has been designed for busy senior law firm leaders and marketers who don't have the time to spend days out of the office. What you'll return with is a better sense of how to grow your firm out of the recession, build deeper relationships with your clients and improve the standing of the marketing function within the firm. You will also hear from senior law firm marketers from large international firms such as Baker & McKenzie and Hogan Lovells who will impart their relevant experience on topics that include brand strategy, international branding, reputation management and technology.

If you are involved in the strategic growth of your law firm via marketing and business development strategies and tactics then you simply can't afford to miss out on the one-of-a-kind insight that this conference will provide!

WHO SHOULD ATTEND?

Anyone responsible for marketing and business development in a UK or European law firm, including Marketing and Business Development Directors, Heads of Corporate Communications, Managing Partners, Managing Directors and Chief Executives.
